

Dear colleagues and friends of SEEC,

It is with great honor and pleasure that we extend warm greetings to you on behalf of the Infectious Disease Society of the Republic of North Macedonia and International Medical Association Bulgaria (IMAB). We are delighted to announce the 14th SEEC Conference on Infections and Cancer, to be held in Ohrid, North Macedonia, from October 3rd to 6th, 2024.

This conference promises to serve as a significant gathering of scholars, researchers, and professionals in the field, providing an invaluable platform for the exchange of knowledge and ideas.

Infectious diseases and infectology constitute integral aspects of everyday medical challenges and have consistently remained pivotal components of numerous other medical disciplines. Particularly in recent times, with the emergence of new infectious diseases, our collective role in combating these threats has assumed heightened significance.

Esteemed lecturers, both domestic and international luminaries, will share their invaluable insights and experiences, addressing not only the prevailing challenges in infectious diseases but also delving into the evolving landscape of emerging infectious diseases. With their expertise, they will illuminate modern strategies and approaches aimed at effectively managing these complex health threats.

Your active participation in the Congress, through the exchange of knowledge, expert discussions, and collaborative efforts, is instrumental. By showcasing your expertise and contributing to the discourse, you play a pivotal role in advancing the field of infectology and shaping the global response to infectious diseases, including emerging threats.

Thank you for your continued support, and we look forward to communicating more news about the upcoming Congress!
